1. What is the camp's emphasis?

The kind of camp experience your child may want to have is very important. Do you prefer a specialized camp that focuses on a specific theme like sports, education or arts? Or are you looking for a camp that offers a variety of activities? Make sure you know the general focus of a camp when considering.

2. Are the camp staff qualified to teach your child?

Are they trained? Have they worked with kids before? Depending on the camp, the requirements to be a counselor/coach can vary.

3. Will your child be safe?

Is there trained first aid staff nearby? Are there lifeguards when children are swimming? Does the camp do background checks on all employees?

4. What does a typical day/week look like?

Does the camp have an organized schedule that will keep your children interested in the program? Making sure that your child is engaging in activities they love may be the most important factor when looking for a camp.

5. How does the camp approach discipline?

Parents want to know and feel more comfortable with a camp that practices values and rules similar to their own parenting practices at home. If a child understands the rules and core values within a camp, they are more likely to have a positive experience.

6. Is the camp accommodating to personal needs?

Does your child have a food allergy or a medical condition? Parents want to know that their child is being taken care of.

7. How does the camp communicate with the child's family?

Can you stay updated with your child's progress at camp? Will you be notified if anything happens to your child? Find a camp whose communication with children and their families is a top priority to make sure you know where your child is at all times.

8. What does the camp cost?

Is there scholarships or financial aid available

9. How successful has the camp been in the past?

Parents don't want to send their child to a camp that other children don't like. What is the return rate at the camp? Do children come away from the summer with an unforgettable experience?
